MOLOTOV MAKES CONCESSION TO U. S., BRITISH

Red Troops To Leave When Allied Units Pull Out Of Italy

Commission Planned

The ministerial council decided to establish a commission composed of the big four ambassadors in Rome to interpret for the Italian government the precise meaning of the peace treaty still to be drafted.

The commission will be established for a period of 12 months after the signature of the treaty.

Progress toward drafting a peace treaty for Italy was made at a morning session of the foreign ministers, the first since their conference reopened last Saturday after a month's recess.

Another meeting was scheduled for late afternoon, making this the first double-session day since the ministers reconvened last Saturday. The morning meeting began at 11 a. m.

Still avoiding critical questions, the ministers reviewed the French request for small but strategic realignments of the French-Italian frontier. The French want insurance against another attack from Italy like that of 1940.

Avoid Big Problems

Warily the ministers avoided coming to grips with major controversial issues which inevitably will precipitate a showdown and possibly a conference breakdown. The only big dispute they have touched is Italian reparations, and they got nowhere on that.

Many observers were puzzled over the sight of the four diplomatic leaders spending all yesterday's session discussing complicated minor questions while the biggest problems remained untouched.

The French frontier claims against Italy first arose before the ministers last April. A special commission they appointed made an investigation on the spot and reported back to the council. The ministers sidestepped any final decisions, leaving the question for their deputies.

Territories Disputed

Disputed frontier territories are high mountain valleys with few inhabitants. French claims are designed largely to bring the frontier back to the main mountain ranges and give France a frontier more strategic than the one from which Mussolini began his "stab in the back" attack in June, 1940.

The frontier claimed by France would be roughly that existing before the concessions made by Napoleon III to Victor Emmanuel in the treaty of 1860.

The chief French claims are: (1) a small tract due south of Mont Blanc (2) restoration of the Saint Bernard and Mont Cenis hospices (3) an 18-mile broad strip of strategic high ground commanding the French fortress city of Briançon (4) a small area around Col de l'Arche (5) valleys of the Tignes and Brigue containing two important power stations which supply Genoa.

AAF REVEALS LARGEST PLANE NOW COMPLETED

WASHINGTON, June 20—The Army Air Forces has announced completion of the XB-36—the world's largest land-based bomber. Departing from conventional design, the new bomber has six 3,000-horsepower engines in the trailing edge of the 230-foot wings. The propellers push rather than pull the big bomber.

Initial flights of the XB-36 are not scheduled to take place until later this summer. Ground tests will be conducted for the next five or six weeks, the AAF said.

The bomber, which has a 163-foot fuselage, was built at the Fort Worth, Tex., plant of the Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp. It will require a crew of 15 men.

GIRL BORN WITH HEART OUTSIDE BODY SUCCUMBS

LANCASTER, Pa., June 20—A seven-pound baby girl born with its heart on the outside of its body failed to survive a delicate operation performed to restore the organ to its normal position.

The child was born to Mrs. Valantine Steffy, 35, Maytown, a former Canadian army nurse, shortly after noon yesterday.

Three hours later, Dr. John L. Atlee Jr., Lancaster, who once saved the life of a man by removing his heart and sewing up a knife wound, operated on the child. It died an hour after the operation.

Russians Split With U. S. On Atom Control

and what Gromyko described as a "primordial" step in banishing the threat of atomic war, is a draft treaty binding signatory nations:

1. Never to use atomic weapons.

2. To prohibit the production or storage of such weapons.

3. To destroy all existing atom bombs within 90 days after the treaty goes into effect.

This treaty, Gromyko proposed, should be passed on by the UN security council and then ratified by all nations of the world. It would come into effect after ratification by half the signatory states, including France, Russia, China, Great Britain and the United States.

While both the United States and Russia have now advanced plans for outlawing atomic warfare and providing sanctions against illegal use of atomic energy, the proposals differ in certain fundamentals as follows:

Veto power—Baruch said "there must be no veto to protect those who violate their solemn agreements not to develop or use atomic energy for destructive purposes." Gromyko opposed "efforts directed to undermine the unanimity of the members of the security council," and said later he was referring to suggestions that big power veto rights be limited.

International enforcement machinery—Baruch demanded "an international law with teeth in it" to punish violators. Gromyko called for "the elaboration of a system of sanctions for application against unlawful use of atomic energy," but indicated this could well follow ratification of the proposed treaty outlawing the atom bomb.

Peaceful atomic development—Baruch proposed that all "dangerous" activities should be placed under a global monopoly which would inspect, control and license all other atomic activities. Gromyko made no mention of any such international agency, but stressed the urgent need for a general exchange of basic atomic information among the nations of the world.

HENDRON FREED OF BURGLARY, THEFT CHARGES

Renick Hendron, 23, former Williamsport resident arrested early in June in Auglaize county as a suspect in a large number of burglaries and automobile accessory thefts which occurred in various areas from Pickaway county northward to Lima and Wapakoneta, was freed Thursday for lack of evidence.

Police Chief William F. McCrady disclosed that two Circleville men, who accompanied him to Lima, Monday, were unable to identify merchandise in possession of Hendron as having been stolen in burglaries in Circleville. The two are Albert Reid, tavern proprietor, and Sheldon Winner, operator of Winner's garage.

Under questioning by authorities at Lima, Chief McCrady said, Hendron steadfastly denied that he ever had perpetrated any thefts or burglaries. After Hendron's arrest a few weeks ago at a tourist camp midway between Lima and Wapakoneta, Sheriff Charles Radcliff was notified and it was then stated that the arresting officers had recovered a large quantity of loot from garages, filling stations, hardware and other stores in southern and central Ohio.

Sheriff Radcliff said that Hendron had left Williamsport a few weeks prior to his arrest. When departing Hendron had a heavily laden trailer. While at Williamsport, the sheriff said, Hendron was known to have made frequent motor trips at night. Part of the time he lived at Williamsport Hendron worked as a farm hand. Sheriff William Bailey at Lima said the articles found in Hendron's possession included auto radios, fog lights and other accessories, flashlights, large quantities of cigars and cigarettes, candies, groceries, clothing, shoes, paints, paint brushes, jacks and tools, new tires, and 700 one-pound bags of popcorn.

MAYOR ARRESTED
COLUMBUS, June 20—Gov. Frank J. Lausche said today he had received a telegram signed "Mayor Joseph B. Cox" that said "as a producer buyer I am sorry I can't be present at the hearing" scheduled on charges that the former Brady Lake mayor was guilty of "misconduct and neglect of duty."

earlier this week by Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach and chairman W. Willard Wirtz of the wage stabilization board.

Their statements coincided with initial efforts of senate and house conferees to draft a new price bill comprising widely-divergent legislation passed by each house. Conferees met for the second time today.

Some members of the conference committee predicted that an agreement would be reached today on the length of the extension of OPA. The present price law expires June 30. The house has approved a nine-month extension while the senate proposed a year's continuance.

Bowles said he was concerned over "apparent confusion" about the effect of amendments attached to price legislation.

SCIO TO RISE SLIGHTLY AGAIN IN THIS AREA

hay and soy beans ran into estimated millions. More showers were expected today in central Ohio with cloudiness foreseen for Friday. The forecast for Saturday was for clear weather.

Fields along the Scioto, its tributaries and other rivers in the state were soaked thoroughly and farmers must wait for some time to fight the battle against weeds in cornfields that can still be salvaged.

Hay and wheat harvesting will be delayed by the flood. Bottom lands where the river waters washed out the young corn may not yield a crop and it was believed too late to replant.

A flash flood on Chapman creek, a Mad river tributary in Clark county drowned 200 chickens owned by Mrs. Anna Zerke, Tremont City. Her son, Wildon, waded through chin-deep water to rescue a sow and five pigs.

A bridge abutment and sections of highways were washed out in Clark county.

The Hocking river damaged crops in Athens county.

Other southeastern Ohio streams caused highways to be closed.

STATE GUARD TO GET TRAINING

General Pancoast said. Organization of some units probably would be held up pending the leasing or construction of facilities to meet war department specifications.

Pancoast said the Summer camps would not be drilled in the use of small boats and mortars as in previous war-time camps because "there is no need for such training" at this time.

The field training will be held entirely at Camp Perry instead of at both Camp Light and Camp Perry as was done last Summer.

General Pancoast said that now that the army had withdrawn personnel and prisoners-of-war from Camp Perry it would have sufficient room for more extensive training than last Summer.

He also said that since this may be the last camp for the State Guardsmen he wished to build morale by having the training in two big groups instead of seven small ones as was the case last Summer.

The Guardsmen may feel the pinch of shortages in the breadbasket this Summer unless the state may purchase. General Pancoast said that the Army probably would furnish wheat and shortening for baking purposes and meat from government supplies.

The approximately 120 commanders and officers will be taught by a faculty of 30, headed by Maj. Don L. Caldwell of the corps of military police and Capt. Ira D. Travis of the infantry.

Approximately 1,800 men will be trained at the first of two nine-day field training camps.

The second field training will be attended by approximately 2,100 persons.

NEWS FREEDOM SAID NEEDED TO SAVE WORLD

COLUMBUS, June 20—World freedom of news can avert catastrophe in an extinction-threatened world, E. Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Denver Post, told the international circulation managers association convention here yesterday.

Hoyt said the Russians had minimized the importance of the atomic bomb to their own people with what may be "dire results" to the world.

"It is obvious," he said, "that the people of the world and particularly Russia cannot have the fateful compulsion under which they know nothing of the dreadful terrors the bomb implies."

The publisher said an "adequate" foreign policy of the United States must "express definite disapproval of Russia's continuing peaceful conquests." He said our foreign policy was now showing "steel and unspiciness."

Hoyt urged "as a matter of international salvation" world freedom of news and equal use of communication facilities so the average man will know of the doom that awaits the world if it again indulges in warfare."

LUTHERAN BIBLE SCHOOL PRESENTS PLAY TONIGHT

"The Parable of the Kingdom," a Biblical play, will be presented in full costume at 7:30 tonight in the parish house of the Trinity Lutheran church, by the members of the class of 260 children enrolled in the Bible school.

This play, with its setting in India, will portray some of the customs of that country as well as the parable of the unmerciful servant. This is the Bible parable which tells how the ruler forgave the great debt of his servant who then went forth and unmercifully demanded payment of a small debt which one of his fellow servants owed him.

The public is invited to the program.

157,100 students and 45,000 at camps.

The national guard would receive $110,000,000 of the funds, the organized reserved $58,000,000 and the ROTC $16,872,000.

The committee recommended $350,000,000 for Army relief in occupied areas — $150,000,000 less than the Army requested. It pointed out that this reduced amount should be sufficient as crop conditions in occupied areas were favorable.

Besides the large atomic energy research item, the committee proposed a record peacetime total of $281,500,000 for other Army research programs.

"The high standard and superiority of our military weapons and equipment must be maintained and the availability of proven types superior to those of other nations must be guaranteed," the committee reported.

Referring to the increase in the funds for atomic energy research, the committee reported that Eisenhower and Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, chief of the Manhattan atomic bomb project, testified that the army would need $397,000,000 although half of this amount would be in contract authorizations for fiscal 1948.

Testifying before an appropriations subcommittee on the atomic energy program, Eisenhower opposed giving away any secret until he was assured that other countries would follow a similar policy.

Groves, also opposing making secret atomic information public, said that if Hitler had worked on the bomb he would have had it developed by 1945 at the latest, and there would not have been a long war."

Asked if Army administration of the atomic energy program would hold up development of its peacetime uses, Groves told the subcommittee it "neither impairs nor delays in any way the development of atomic energy for peacetime uses."

"As a matter of fact I think that the administration by the Army—and I may be a little biased as the administrator—has been of such a nature that in fact the peacetime uses of atomic energy will be discovered much sooner than they would be otherwise, and they will be developed on a broader and on a much better basis."

The committee made no change in the budget bureau recommendation of $1,199,500,000 for the air corps next year.

It reported that "developments which are now in progress will make the newest plane of today quite commonplace and in fact outmoded in a relatively short time."

To keep abreast of developments, the committee recommended using $388,776,454 (m) for the procurement of 1,046 "of the most modern aircraft of all types from very heavy bombers and jet fighters to liaison planes and metal gliders."

The committee also recommended locating bases in Alaska, the Marianas, Philippines, Hawaii and Okinawa at an outlay of $195,000,000 over a period of years.

PLANES HAVE TWO CHANCES AT BOMB PRACTICE

Final Rehearsal For Atomic Test is Scheduled On June 25

BY ROBERT BENNYHOFF
United Press Staff Correspondent
KWAJALEIN, June 20—Brig. Gen. Thomas Powers, assistant to the deputy joint task force commander for air, has disclosed that Army and Navy planes have only two more chances to perfect their technique for dropping the atomic bomb next month.

Announcing tentative jobs and positions for 29th AAF planes, Powers said a partial rehearsal was scheduled for today above ship-laden Bikini lagoon.

After today the planes participating in the historic drop will have only one more chance to learn the roles they will play on "able" day—the first day in July that weather conditions permit the bomb drop.

That final dress rehearsal involving all personnel of the task force—Army, Navy, air, water and ground—now is scheduled for June 23. Given the code name "queen day", the date was moved up from its original June 25 because of weather and operational reasons.

Powers, who was one of the leaders of the Marianas-based B-29 wings which smashed Japan in to a smoking surrender, said that 29 four engine AAF planes will play vital roles on queen and able days.

The planes include eight B-29s, eight F-13s (stripped-down B-29s), four C-54s and nine B-17s.

Powers also disclosed there will be only one practice run over the orange-hued Nevada by the bomb-carrying B-29; instead of the three originally planned. The bomb will be dropped if possible on any of the next three passes over target ships.

After the fourth pass, if the bomb still is not dropped, Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, task force commander, will decide whether to reduce the number of participating planes or abandon the attempt on that day.

Powers gave the following tentative appearance, times, altitude and specific jobs for AAF planes: The command ship, a B-29, with Powers aboard, will fly at 8,500 feet, approximately an hour before X-ray hour (between 8 and 9 a. m. the morning of the drop.)

Then the bomb-carrying B-29 will take off at X-ray hour, followed a little above and to the left by an F-13 which will photograph the actual bomb drop. These planes will be flying at an altitude of between 26,000 and 30,000 feet.

Next, two B-29s carrying pressure instruments will fly 1,000 feet above bombing altitude; four F-13 photoplanes at 26,000 feet; four F-13 photoplanes 1,000 feet below bombing altitude; four B-17 drones and five mother ships will enter the atomic bomb cloud at 30,000, 24,000, 18,000 feet and 13,000 feet respectively.

Other planes will carry broadcast, news, the evaluation board and presidential observers.

The only inland Coast Guard station in the United States prior to World War II was located on the Ohio River, at Louisville, Ky.

FARMERS URGED TO MAKE CORN LAST TILL FALL

Farmers with hogs to be fed out this fall and with low stock of old corn were offered a suggestion today by feed specialists of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus, whereby they may be able to stretch their feed supplies without loss of market weight.

Where high quality clover or alfalfa are available, hogs weighing less than 100 pounds may be fed only two pounds of corn per hundred pounds of live weight per day with no protein supplement for three months, according to the specialists.

In recent tests, hogs fed in this manner from the last of June until late September averaged two-thirds of a pound daily gain. At the end of the period, 70-pound hogs averaged 130 pounds each when put on full feed of corn and tankage, free choice, at the close of the pasture season late in September. In another five weeks they weighed 218 pounds, having made an average daily gain of 2.38 pounds during the fattening period.

Under this plan, about one and one-half acres of pasture would be required for ten hogs receiving the half-ration of corn, the specialists said.

NO VACATION PAY FOR VETS

Subsistence Allowances Stop For Students Who Skip Summer Terms

COLUMBUS, O., June 20—Ohio veterans enrolled in educational institutions under provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (G.I. Bill) who plan to "skip" the summer term will not receive subsistence allowances during the period. This ruling was announced today by the Columbus branch office of the Veterans Administration.

The Veterans Administration emphasized that those who remain in school during the summer will continue to receive subsistence payments, but a stop-payment order would go out for those deciding to take "time off" from their studies during the summer months.

Veterans enrolled in educational institutions under terms of the G. I. Bill are paid subsistence allowance of $65 monthly if without dependents and $90 a month with dependents. In addition, they accrue 30 days of authorized leave during a calendar year. A student veteran therefore may receive one month's subsistence during the summer vacation. However, if he accepts this "vacation allowance" his total period of education eligibility is reduced accordingly.

Most of Ohio's student veterans not continuing into the summer term already have had opportunity to elect one of the two alternatives—that of accepting the additional subsistence payment and losing a month's educational eligibility or refusing the payment and retaining a month's credit.

Veterans who discontinue their educational training during the summer months are placed in an interrupted status by the Veterans Administration. The period in which they are on vacation and receive no subsistence does not affect their educational eligibility.

When such veterans resume their education next fall, the restoration of their subsistence allow-

'WHISTLE BAIT' IS NOT ALWAYS GOOD FIGURE

Health Expert Says Perfect Bodies Fail To Gain Much Attention

By DON SMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, June 20—If you're a windy corner jockey who whistles at passing females, you don't know a good whistle subject when you see one.

That's the opinion of Roger Eells, a man who started out in the undertaking business in Lisbon, O., but who now tells people how to doublecross the undertaker in his Columbus physical culture school.

Roger told us there is more to a good figure than simply outstanding curves. Balance is the thing, mates. And he's considered an authority on figures. So un-pucker a while and read.

In 1930, Eells was a tubercular patient at the Mt. Vernon, O., sanatorium as a 93-pounder. Today he scales 175, sports a 46-inch chest and at 38, sound as a pre-Pearl Harbor dollar.

Now he rescues other bone-heap candidates with his success formula and gives women the figures men don't always whistle at but what he rates as the best and most pleasing.

"If a man's attention is attracted first to any particular spot of a woman's figure, she does not have a good figure," Eells said.

"It's not a good figure because it's out of balance," he said. "For example, if a man's first glance is attracted to the large bosom of a woman, such as Mae West, chances are it is out of balance with the rest of her body."

Joan Blondell's figure is rated tops by Eells among the movie colony. As for the men, it's Errol Flynn and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., with "Tarzan" a poor last.

"Johnny Weissmuller has a huge chest and it looks good," Eells said, "but his arms are too thin and it throws his figure out of balance."

"If everyone walked correctly," he added, "they would have good figures and wouldn't be troubled with fatty spots."

The correct way to walk? Here's the position: back to the wall, heels, shoulders and head touching, tilt your hips back so you can't get your hand between the wall and your back.

Eells was graduated from pre-medical school at Ohio State university in 1939 and his Columbus studio is rated as one of the most complete in the nation.

He said he planned to open studios in Portsmouth, Dayton and Canton.

ONE LESS WAR

ONE more war is over. Since November, 1944, the Moslem Turkish-speaking tribes of Sinkiang, once known as Chinese Turkestan, have been fighting the Chinese. Now they have made peace, having won their original wish for local self-government and having consented to merge their troops into the Chinese army.

As the Sinkiang Turks are closely akin to tribes within the adjoining Russian borders, Russian intrigue has been thought to underlie their uprising. Whether or not this was true at first, the Russians do not seem to have been aiding the Turks for some time.

The peace settlement will be a minor contribution to Chinese recovery, but Chiang Kai-shek will probably appreciate even the smallest lightening of his burdens.

NOT ENOUGH PRODUCTION

SOME business leaders have about made up their minds that production on a large scale will not start until 1947. The war emergency, with its war-born industrial controls, will continue that long since Congress is planning to recess the first week in July, not returning until next January. There are the November elections to be prepared for. Strikes and labor's wage increases have slowed output, also. The combination makes the rest of 1946 look bad to them.

The present situation is comparable to what happened in the confusing year of 1919. But the country did right itself, and by 1920 the boom had started. This time it is to be hoped America can have the boom—but not the bust.

POLITICAL CHANGES

ANOTHER casualty of World War II seems to be the old-time political rally. Politicians are finding to their sorrow that people will not turn out to hear some silver-tongued. Home and the radio are far preferable. Besides if it is important, the next day's paper will print it; and if it doesn't, no one has missed anything.

An earlier loss was the torchlight procession with floats, supporting some candidate or party. These were picturesque sights, exciting to anyone with a taste for politics. There has not been one for years.

Politics is becoming more staid. If these changes indicate a tendency to appeal to reason rather than to emotions, they are to be welcomed.

The Eastern Penitentiary in Pennsylvania has done a strange thing in barring murder mysteries from its library shelves. Surely mystery stories are the most moral of all novels, because the one lesson they always teach is that crime does not pay and that even the most clever criminal is caught in the end.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, June 20—The people out here in the Midwest need someone who want to work, some food—and not much else. Particularly they do not want a war, although somehow Washington politics is far off to them, and so is Europe. They read their newspaper headlines and listen to the radio occasionally, wonder if they are to be drafted again, yet they have seen so many international crises, this one does not matter much to them.

Basically, in talking with them, the farmer, the small villager, the city dweller, you get the very definite impression they do not like Russia, and are somewhat more isolationist in their viewpoint than the east suspects. This is not due to the Chicago Tribune and its large circulation, but rather to their natural instincts. Indeed you find such monstrosities of journalism as the Chicago Sun, owned by the rich Marshall Field and almost a counterpart of the indescribable New York newspaper PM, calling Justices Frankfurter and his majority in the Illinois redistricting case "conservatives".

It will greatly surprise the east to learn that Frankfurter is a conservative, even if only in the Sun. To those who know him best he is a radical who knows the kind of law he taught at Harvard, and I think he is such to the great bulk of the people out here, although not to the steel workers out in and near Gary or the auto workers of Detroit. But while the east hears so much of, and pays such great attention to them and their CIO, the Midwest numerically, politically and economically is still the small town villager or the dirt farmer, whose first concern is the amount of moisture distributed through this area by unprecedented rains. He is watching the clouds for corn growing weather and has seen his son come back from the war. What state secretary Byrnes is doing in Paris or the CIO in Detroit is of only incidental concern to him. As I say, he wants to raise food for man and beast, and his help back.

The food situation is easy in Chicago, but harder up through Wisconsin and down into central Illinois. In those latter two places it is more like the east. You stand in line for nearly everything excepting in the smaller towns, and when you get up to the counter you will more than likely find it gone, and you will either take what they have or let it go for a while. In Chicago they still have corned roastbeef, and occasionally a steak which is not likely to be corned. There the hotels are crowded, and so also are the trains, which are nearer on time than during the war (they need equipment badly). There also you may obtain fine vegetables, although Chicago is largely a meat eating community and is plainly being supplied with meats because the packing houses are there, and the people are accustomed to eating of meats. Butter still is on nearly every table, as they do not accept oleo widely.

Business people are painting their factories, and otherwise sprucing up and—you might say—getting ready for business. They have more than they can care for, with the help they have, which is coming more slowly than expected, and is still worried about the draft. This applies largely to central Illinois in the small

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

HEART OF THE SQUEEZE
EVERY squeeze play involves several indispensable components. First is the card on which a victim has to discard. Second—and this is the heart of the squeeze—there is a suit in which the squeeze has an entry from his own hand into the opposite holding. Third, there are cards in at least two suits which are not winners before the squeezing card is led, but which will become winners if a victimized opponent is obliged to discard in their suits.

That was extremely conservative bidding by South, who might well have bid 4-Hearts instead of three on his third turn. But he was not especially confident of his own playing ability, and demonstrated sound grounds for his fears by failing to make the extra trick, which he should have after West led the club A.

South ruffed that, scored the heart A, K and J, the spade A, K, Q and J, the diamond A, the club

K and Q, then ruffed the club 5 with his last trump and finally gave up the spade 6 to the 10. By changing the order of events, to save the diamond play for late in the hand as an entry to dummy, he would have taken no additional risk and would have been following the formula for a squeeze position. And it would have worked. All that he had to do, after ruffing the club A and taking three top hearts, was to take in the dummy's two high clubs while in the dummy, run his four top spades and then, to the 11th trick, lay down the last heart.

At that stage, he should have saved the diamond A-Q in dummy, plus a club, while he himself had the spade 6, heart 8 and diamond 6. The heart lead then would have put the pinchers on East, who could not have kept his high spade and his two diamonds. Whichever he discarded would have built the winning trick for South.

Whooping Cough Can Be Abolished!

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE best thing about whooping cough is that in this day and age no child need have it. It can be virtually abolished from any community.

And that is about the only good thing that can be said of this tormenting disease, which kills so many babies under the age of two, and so weakens older youngsters with repeated bouts of convulsive coughing that they fall an easy prey to other illnesses.

Helpful Serum

As yet, no completely satisfactory methods of treatment which directly attack the disease itself have been found, although what is known as hyperimmune serum often is helpful. That is, nothing which will kill or neutralize the germ which causes whooping cough has been discovered.

Some recent animal experiments have given a broad hint that perhaps the new drug, streptomycin will be of value. But so far we cannot be sure because tests on whooping cough in human beings have not been carried out for a sufficient length of time to determine streptomycin's effect. Until further work is done, chief reliance in saving lives from whooping cough must be placed on prevention.

According to Dr. Louis W. Sauer of the Northwestern University Medical School, whooping cough has been practically banished from the city of Evanston, Illinois, during the past few years through the conscientious application of a few simple rules.

Preventive Injections

Most important step in this program of prevention is the giving of injections of whooping cough vaccine to all infants as soon as possible after they reach six months of age. Furthermore, even though children have received this vaccine, it is necessary to give another injection or booster dose to increase their immunity if they should at a later date be exposed to the disease.

Dr. Sauer suggests a third injection just before a child enters school. There are some who believe that the whooping cough vaccine may be effective in building protection against the disease even though it is given as early as the third month.

This part of the program immunizes the coming generation of school children but it does nothing to protect those of the present from this highly contagious illness. Therefore, the second step in any preventive program must be the early diagnosis and immediate quarantine of any who contract whooping cough. In this way, spread of the disease will be lessened.

Children Separated

Children who have been in contact with the disease and who are not themselves immune, should be kept separate from other children until the incubation period has passed. Only in this way can a community make certain that those in the early and most highly contagious stage of whooping cough are not passing it on to others.

Early symptoms are those of a common cold and, for this reason, a sick child may infect dozens of playmates before the true nature of the cough is recognized and quarantine established.

When a baby, no matter how young, is exposed to whooping cough, the infant may be protected by at once giving an injection of what is called human pertussis immune serum. This is blood serum taken from adults who have had whooping cough in childhood and who have received injections of whooping cough vaccine to increase their immunity to the disease.

It is suggested that if the baby was exposed to the disease for only a short time, one injection of the immune serum given into the muscles of the buttocks will be sufficient. If there has been more prolonged exposure, two injections at a three-to-five-day interval are advised.

Mothers should follow the advice of the physician concerning when the whooping cough vaccine is to be given and, should an infant be exposed to the disease, the prompt administration of the immune serum may be life-saving.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

THE REDHEAD laughed, not pleasantly, when the other girl said her husband didn't want her to work. "Sue, we do a whole lot of things we never did before. You'll find out I figured if my husband was staying there long, I'd find an apartment and bring down the kid. Say, I walked my shoes off. Up one street and down the other. Not a chance. Not a thing. They look at my clothes and they say: 'What does your husband do?' 'He's in the service.' That's all you need tell them. They slam the door in your face."

Her words went through Corbett's ears without touching his brain. Numbness had begun to crawl through him, in which the one thing alive was his craving for liquor.

Mae brushed her red hair back from her forehead. "Before my husband was shipped, I traveled all over with him. I lived in every jerk town in the country. Believe me, I lived in more dumps. In the south. In the west. The minute they hear you're a serviceman's wife, wherever you go, they rent you the worst dump in town and charge you like it was the Ritz."

"They took our husband away and that's what they give us." "They tell us stay home. What's the matter with us, running around just like gypsies, chasing after our men?"

"Just stay home and let some she-wolf come get 'im!" The southern girl sniffed. "Ah, too! mah husband of Ah heard 'bout him runnin' around with some girl. Ah'd jus' staid datin' the first man that asks me."

"Oh, you will. You will any way. I sitting home is no fun. Gee, there's seven nights in a week. You got to go out or you start in climbing the walls."

For a moment or two, neither one spoke. Then the drawl asked: "How long is youah husband's gonna be there?"

The red-head raised her shoulders. "Heaven only knows. The doctors won't say. They took off his leg."

"They took off his leg!" Sue's voice rose, shrill with horror. "Ah think Ah'd die if that happened to mine."

"Oh, you don't die. You don't die that easy. You just sit down and start figuring out how you're going to get by. I'm darn glad I saved all that money."

That was enough. That was an awful, Corbett went into the car. The gunner's mate's wife elbowed him in the passage and he flattened himself on the corridor wall to let her go past. She nodded at him, paused with the green curtain in her hand as if she welcomed the chance to trade a few words. "I'm moving my kids in here for the night. If they don't sleep, at least they won't disturb the whole car." Her face was smudged and there were black half-moons under her eyes. She was wearing the red coat like a cape. Joanie held on to the hem of the coat and the baby blinked sleepily over her shoulder. The kid had his thumb in his mouth and his flushed face was blotched with the rings tears make on dirt. She pushed open the door beyond the green curtain. The washroom was a sty. It reeked of smoke and stale tobacco. Wet, crumpled brown paper towels littered the floor. The plumbing was bad. You could see the rivulet of a leak, creeping under the closed door.

What pigs women were! Corbett thought, and the thought gave him pleasure. By the illogic of hate, he could attach it to Nina. The ladies' room is a pigsty. Nina Gilmore's a lady. Nina Gilmore's a pig.

The sailor's wife sniffed. "Disgusting! But it's six of one and half a dozen of the other. At least they can stretch out on the sofa in here. The love seat. Excuse me!" In spite of her weariness, she managed to smile.

Joanie tugged Corbett's pants leg. "Was you on my train all the time? I didn't see you on my train."

Her mother caressed the kid's hair. "Joanie thinks everything's hers. She thinks the whole world is hers. Well, I can't kick. She's not been too bad. . . . Say good night to the officer, Joanie."

The child smiled at him, as if he was papa or uncle. "Where you going to sleep?"

He gestured toward the coach. "In there. On the rack."

The kid's eyes opened wide. "Ooh, you'll fall off and get hurt." She put her hand into his. It was a soft, sticky nothing inside his big palm. "Sleep here with me." She sidled up to his leg, cuddled her head on his thigh.

"Joanie Taylor, behave yourself," he mother warned.

He smiled. "That kid's a play for them all. She misses her daddy, I guess."

The train lurched, at last starting. Corbett staid the child to keep her from falling. He gave her an affectionate pat. "Good-night, Joanie. Sleep tight."

"Good night, lieutenant," the young woman said. "See you tomorrow." She lowered the curtain. The Palm Queen was running, rumbling and grinding and clashing over the ties to the north. Corbett felt slightly better and he said to himself, feeling at his own thoughts: "The touch of a little child's hand—"

The coach gave him a sense of home-coming. There were remembered faces; the familiar pattern of luggage and orange bags up on the rack. Most of the seats were already tipped back for the night in a comic position, neither sitting nor lying. The fat, middle-aged couple in one and two lay back with abdomens distended. Grandma in three had a soiled, crumpled handkerchief over her face. The two women in black slumped in their chairs, fur coats over knees, eyes shut against the bright light in the ceiling. The horse-player's seat and his own were vacant. He dawdled before it, trying to decide about staying. The Marine, sipping milk through a straw in a carton, greeted him eagerly. Dr. Frankel, sunglasses at last taken off, put down the book he was reading and motioned to Corbett to sit down in the chair next to him. He shook his head, went back through the car. Chuckie, Joan's pal, put his hand through the arm of the seat where he was bedded down with his papa and lunged for Corbett's leg. The frizzy haired female with the earrings gave him a leer, contemptuous this time. She had a sailor, a leather-skinned, middle-aged gob, who should have known better but actually looked pleased with his present companion.

He went on to the men's room. Kalcis was in there alone, asleep on the leather settee. His mouth was open. You could see the yellow fangs of his teeth, hear, over the grind of the train, his harsh snore.

Corbett went out to the platform, stood just back of the door, and watched for the porter. He thought: "If that guy don't keep his promise, I'll slit his black throat." He kept repeating the threat in his mind until it became a part of the noise of the wheels on the track.

Georgia rolled past, dark cut-outs of tree-tops against a black sky, the blink of the light from a cabin, the flash of a lantern from freights on a siding, the wavering, thin beams of a moving car's headlights.

He saw it merely with eyes, his mind fixed on one object, drawing down to a point as fine, as imperative, as the hair lines of the bombight, upon getting liquor and drinking himself into stupor. When, finally, through the glass, he saw the porter flung a pillow, he went in and tweaked the man's sleeve. "Well?"

The Negro stared at him blankly. "You ask me to a pillow?"

"You know darn well what I want."

"Mah closet's locked up. Can't fin' the key." The man pretended to be completely taken up with the cushion, smoothing its seams, pulling its corners meticulously square. "Can't hepp' you 'r now. Ver' busy. You go back to that lounge cah. Mebbe somebody got somethin' there."

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, June 20

THE astral conditions encourage a decisive and concentrated effort in the direction of achieving important goals and major objectives in business as well as personal relations. The public and those in influential places are disposed to be generously co-operative and dependable.

However, there is an inclination to be too eager to put over these plans, and haste, rash or impetuous conduct would provide disastrous, and may forfeit good will and substance. Remain calm and reasonable, and be careful in physical actions.

Those whose birthday it is may find the year one of much promise for the engineering of important projects of large scope and influence, private as well as public. Those in influential places are disposed to be friendly and solidly co-operative, but danger and loss would be the result of hasty, rash, immoderate or temperamental words or acts. And carelessness might also cause accident or sorrow.

A child born on this day will be capable and ambitious for large propositions, but a tendency to harsh, rash or careless activities might prove detrimental to its progress.

Inside WASHINGTON

Naming of Vinson, Austin Stettinius May Not Run
Meets With Capitol O. K. For Senate From Virginia

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON — President Truman's decision to appoint Treasury Secretary Fred Vinson to be chief justice of the United States and Senator Austin (R) of Vermont, American representative to the United Nations Security Council, is reported to be a real political compromise. As it turned out, they appear to be the most popular appointments of Mr. Truman's tenure.

There were compelling reasons and some pressures on the White House to name a Republican to the supreme court following the death of Chief Justice Harlan Stone. In the interest of harmony in Congress, the natural tendency by Mr. Truman was to follow this course. But Vinson was Mr. Truman's original choice for the bench.

The resignation of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., from his UN post gave the chief executive a golden opportunity. He wasted no time in selecting Austin to succeed Stettinius in a post involving foreign affairs, a sensitive spot where non-partisanship is now needed more than elsewhere.

By naming Vinson to the court at the same time, the two appointments balanced each other. For the most part, Republicans lauded the Vinson appointment. Only a few noted that it might have been more desirable to have a Republican named to the bench. Incidentally, some political observers regard the Austin appointment as a backhanded slap at some of the congressional New Dealers. Senator Claude Pepper (D) of Florida had called loudly for the nomination of Commerce Secretary Henry Wallace to the post.

● OBSERVERS ARE LESS CERTAIN now than they were earlier that Stettinius will be a candidate for the Senate from Virginia. When he stepped down from his UN post, the report was widely spread that he hoped to enter the Senate race from Virginia to fill the spot vacated by the death of veteran Senator Carter Glass. However, Virginia politics are not that simple.

Candidates are usually chosen by the machine and, on the general record, nominations are given to those who have been active in local and state politics over a long period of time.

The senatorial post is generally regarded as the reward of long and distinguished service. This is compensated by the fact that it's usually "once a senator from Virginia, always a senator from Virginia." Stettinius has lived in Culpeper, Va., for many years since coming into government service early in the New Deal.

He was educated at the University of Virginia. He is also a registered Democrat in Virginia. But his background is big business and he has never held elective office. In view of this situation, observers doubt that he can win the post.

● LABOR OBSERVERS DOUBT that the committee for Maritime Unity will have a long lease on life. Ostensibly the CMU is to become the big international union of maritime workers, but insiders do not believe the six CIO members and one independent will stick together.

The organization exists in name only and has not yet been legally formed. Its paid advertisements during the maritime dispute have been signed merely: Committee of Maritime Unions.

Most observers believe that the CMU will do well to hold together during the current crisis. The owners would definitely like to split it apart. Reports of disunity have leaked out of the CMU councils and a strike, it's believed, would probably finish the "unity."

For one thing, there are too many "strong men" among members of CMU—Harry Bridges of the longshoremen; Joe Curran, National Maritime Union, and Joseph Selly, American communications association—to weld a solid, lasting international organization of maritime employees.

The lone independent, V. J. Malone, Irish boss of the Marine Firemen, goes pretty much his own way in negotiations, despite public protestations in behalf of a united front.

GIS ON OKINAWA EXPRESS IDEAS ON DRAFTING

Hubert Puckett Sends Copy Of Letter Showing How Servicemen Feel

T/S Hubert M. Puckett, who has been on Okinawa since August, 1945, has sent to his mother, Mrs. Myrtle Puckett, 157 Watt street, a copy of a letter which many of the men on the island are sending to their congressmen.

He states "this letter expresses the opinions of most of the men on this 'rock'. A lot of the fellows are sending them to their senators or representatives who will most likely file them in the waste paper basket."

The letter follows:

This is a very informal letter to you from a number of the men now on the island of Okinawa. We assure you that the opinions set forth here coincide with the opinions of all the men in this theatre. We hope you will be able to use this information to the best results of everyone concerned.

It is the opinion of the men in the overseas theatres that the American public is not aware of or is uninterested in the true state of affairs that is confronting the service men who were unlucky enough to be sent overseas shortly before or shortly after the war end.

There are a great number of men overseas that have anywhere from 17 months to 23 months (and a few days) service as of the 30th of June 1946 and who are not eligible for discharge. Likewise there are those of us who have from nine months to 17 months overseas and since last September have received no credit for being away from our homes and loved ones while men in the States have been with in at least calling distance of home and many have their wives and families with them and are receiving credit for the same time that we are. There is not one of us here that is complaining about doing his share in the "Winning of the Peace" since so many of our Buddies and relatives lost their lives doing just that. At the same time, however, we feel that it is about time we were remembered and given a chance to come home.

One thing that has shaken the faith of the average man overseas is the manner in which the draft act was handled by the "Leaders" of our country. It was a selfish example of political "Buck Passing". We are fully aware of the present problems of demobilization. In the future that lays ahead of us as a nation, and as individuals our obligations of course must be carried out to the best of each man's ability. Throughout the conflict the burden of attaining final victory rested on the shoulders of all the people. Just as it was for Victory so must it be for peace. I nor any other American wishes to jeopardize the effectiveness of the Occupation Armies. The occupation of these countries is one of the necessary evils, from which we as well as the entire world, will benefit by, and have a better place in which to live. After every war it has been our idea that only trust, understanding and good faith, among the fellow nations of the world and a lasting peace be conceived. Have we forgotten that good faith in one another begins right at home. If we lack it among ourselves, we must certainly become hypocritical in the eyes of the entire world.

Before we get too far away from the Draft Bill, we would like to know why the "House and Senate" are reluctant to draft men in their teens and men above a certain age limit. Everyday we pass grave yards that are filled with men in just these categories. What we would like to know is why, now that the dangers of war are over, are these men exempt. There are men in the Army right now who fall in this class and there is certainly nothing being done to release them. When it comes to teenagers one of the arguments is the interruption of their education. The Army has extensive educational programs in every field of interest imaginable and anyone at all interested need not let his education lapse because he is in the Army.

As a matter of fact the training that goes along with it would be beneficial in lots of ways. On the other hand there are those of us in the Army whose "school days" are over and whose chief interest now is getting back and once more being the head of the family and doing the job that is required of a family head. Likewise there are those among us who are anxious to return and marry and start their families.

What this all boils down to is the fact that for one thing we do not like to be called, "Draft Dodgers", and "Less Than Men", by politicians like Senator Rankin of Mississippi, for his knowledge most of the men now overseas were in the Army sometime, even before the end of the War in Europe, much less the end of the War in Japan. We want to be heard and want to be given a little consideration instead of being forgotten in the "Battle Of The Whitehouse". We realize that men were overseas for a good many months than we have in service now, but that was when fighting going on and they really couldn't be spared, but we know now there is no longer any need for each man to be in the Army so long. With the situation in hand as it is today, a competent Draft Bill passed by a body of COMPETENT Congressmen working for the benefit of their country instead of their own, could easily build up an Army large enough to rotate the men overseas and in the States. No man would kick about 18 months service or one year overseas or some such arrangement, but when it runs over that we think it is too much.

If there is anything at all you can do to call our feelings to the attention of our "Friends and Neighbors" our appreciation would know no bounds. On behalf of every man overseas, whether he is "sweating it out", on the island of Okinawa, or lounging amid the beauty of Paris, we thank you for your help in the effort to see that the Soldiers of Democracy receive "Fair Play".

KENNETH GOOD ENLISTS FOR ARMY SERVICE

Legion Posts Cooperating With Recruiters In New Soldier Drive

Kenneth E. Good, son of Michael Good, 1022 South Court street, has enlisted for 18 months in the regular Army, according to an announcement by S/Sgt. R. H. Kuhn, recruiter in charge of the Circleville Army recruiting station.

The new soldier is a graduate of Circleville high school in the class of 1946. He has two brothers who have been discharged from the armed forces.

He plans to earn an education from the GI bill of rights after he has completed his 18 months of Army service. He also plans to study a trade that will help him in civilian life.

Circleville and Kingston American Legion posts are cooperating in the voluntary American Legion Army recruiting drive now under way.

"Nowhere in commercial or industrial life can a young man obtain the advantages offered by the Army in the way of financial security and the opportunity to learn a trade or profession," is the statement made by Harry A. Eaton, state commander of the American Legion, in a message to all Ohio Legion Post commanders, urging each American Legion member to become familiar with the beneficial rights offered to enlistees under the VALAR plan. Under the VALAR plan the U. S. Army recruiting service has the active cooperation and support of the American Legion in the current drive to obtain 1,600,000 enlistments.

"The American Legion has set its goal as one enlistment per month for each 100 members. Based on a membership of 140,000 in Ohio 1400 enlistments would be obtained each month," Mr. Eaton pointed out.

Stressing the educational benefits offered, Mr. Eaton declared that approximately 2,080,000 high school graduates will be unable to enter college this fall due to the crowded conditions existing at colleges and universities. "The condition will not abate for three or four years," he stated, "and after a three-year enlistment a young man can attend the school of his choice for 48 months, which amounts to five years of training."

"The American Legion knows that men who have served their country are the potential leaders of tomorrow. It is up to the Legion to foster and encourage that leadership that we may make of this country a better America. Service to his country has always resulted in a better citizen. The better the soldier, the better the citizen."

"And younger men who join the Regular Army have an interesting period ahead. Every youth worth his salt has an inborn love of adventure, the sight of strange lands and the longing for romance. The Army guarantees all these, with the possible exception of romance," Mr. Eaton concluded.

BOUQUETS, BRICKBATS FOR TRUMAN'S APPOINTMENTS

THE COUNTRY RALLIED with both approving and unfavorable comments on President Truman's latest appointments, with the naming of Secretary of Treasury Fred M. Vinson, center, as chief justice of the supreme court winning the most bouquets. On Capitol Hill, where Vinson served seven terms in the House, there is a wave of approval of his choice for the nation's top-most judicial post, with the only criticism centered on the fact that Harold Burton remains the lone Republican on the bench. But while Vinson's appointment was being applauded, some senators, including a handful of New Deal Democrats, were not enthusiastic about the president's selection of Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, left, stormy petrel of the Truman administration, to succeed Vinson. It is reported that John L. Sullivan, right, nominated for the undersecretary of Navy post that Edwin Pauley failed to get, will encounter no difficulty in winning Senate approval. At present Sullivan is assistant secretary of the Navy for air.

RE-WED ON ANNIVERSARY

CLEVELAND — To celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Scherling of Cleveland re-enacted their wedding ceremony at St. Stephen's Catholic church recently and even rode a horse and buggy there.

The ceremony was identical with the one performed 50 years ago. There was the same priest, maid-of-honor, best man, and the flower girl, when then was only three.

On hand to see that things ran smoothly were the Scherlings' three daughters, three sons, 10 grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

WEST WELCOMES TOURISTS

CASPER, Wyo. — Tourists arriving here this season are being given the "full Western treatment."

Girls garbed in Western togs, including the famed 10-gallon hats and cowboy boots, are greeting the visitors. In addition to welcoming the tourists, the girls aid them in finding housing accommodations.

MISSING WITNESS

Private investigator Richard Rogue (Dick Powell) tries to hold out the key witness in a murder trial, thus upsetting the plans of the murderer's brother, who happens to be a big operator with more connections than a postwar vacuum cleaner, during "Missing Witness," latest episode in Mutual's thrilling detective series, "Rogue's Gallery." Thursday, (7:30-8 p. m. EST). Dee Engelbach produces and directs, and Leith Stevens conducts the orchestra in special background music.

CARRINGTON PLAYHOUSE

"Country Squire," a comedy drama about a checker-playing justice of the peace who indulges in extra-legal shenanigans to humanize the letter of the law, will be heard on "The Carrington Playhouse" over the Mutual network, Thursday, (7:30 p. m., EST). Written by Elliott Curtis, former editor of Click magazine, who is himself a J. P. in a small Pennsylvania town, "Country Squire" is the fifth script by a new radio author to win performance on the current Carrington Playhouse series.

Lee," the evening's operetta, Thursday, at 8 p. m., EST. Balancing the colorful and nostalgic production is a packet of current hits, led off by The Baritone's singing of "Sioux City Sue." Promised also is a Haymes-Forrest duet treatment of "Bebaba Luba," while Gordon Jenkins' crew of 36 features the maestro's arrangement of "Way Down Yonder."

DR. BLACKBURN LAUDS ARIZONA CLIMATE, SIGHTS

Health Commissioner Ending
Vacation Trip; Will Return Monday

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Pickaway county health commissioner, and Mrs. Blackburn, expect to arrive home in Cincinnati next Monday following a three-week vacation trip during which they have visited his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Bonecutter, at Tucson, Ariz. They left Cincinnati June 3 and made the trip to the southwest by railroad.

In a letter received by Tom E. Wilson, publisher of The Daily Herald, Thursday, Dr. Blackburn praises Tucson and gives an interesting recital of the vacation trip in general and Arizona in particular.

He said, in part: "The Cincinnati Herald has reached us promptly and regularly while we have been in Tucson and we all enjoy reading the news from home. We will start for home Sunday.

"I am enjoying this dry climate. The sun shines every day—and to the tune of 103 to 110 degrees. I have not minded the heat. In fact I enjoy it.

"We have taken several trips to the mountains which completely surround Tucson. The mountains are beautiful. I have been especially interested in the wild life here, both flora and fauna. The desert plants are the saguaro—the state flower—barrel cactus, prickly pear, cotillo, yucca, Spanish bayonet, and many others. Many plants are cultivated in the city and on the ranches but only if watered daily. Many of the patios have beautiful green lawns of Bermuda grass. Oleanders are in bloom now. Palm trees here are very pretty.

"We saw two deer while driving in the foothills of Mt. Lennon. Wild boars, mountain lions, deer, rattlesnakes and Gila Monsters are common.

"There is a variety of dove here which resemble our mourning dove but is smaller and has some white wing feathers and a light breast. There are many varieties of song birds which I have not been able to identify.

"I have also been interested in the houses. Most of the homes are low and of Spanish architecture. They are built of brick or cement or adobe. Most houses are plastered inside and out and no wallpaper is used. Nearly all of the public buildings and homes are air-conditioned. Many types of coolers are used in the homes.

"Tucson is a beautiful city and a nice place to live if one likes sunshine."
